

Business Consulting

As clients' trusted advisors, some for generations, we are privy to the inner workings of their businesses and the issues they face. Not surprisingly, clients turn to EisnerLubin for strategic advice to help them navigate the increasingly choppy waters of today's business environment.

Clients appreciate the creative, tactical thinking we bring to their challenges and value the honest, independent counsel they receive. The credibility we have developed allows us to tell clients when they may be wrong or to suggest what may prove to be a difficult business choice.

EisnerLubin's clients looking to do business abroad may benefit from our association with Geneva Group International, providing access to professionals in more than 80 countries around the world who understand the unique business practices of their locales.

Initially, a new client may engage us for a special project — to provide an innovative, outside perspective on a special need. Often these engagements result in growing trust and expanded business relationships. In other cases, a one-time consulting project is performed working with the client's existing accounting firm.

Here is a sampling of the strategic counsel available to business decision makers:

- Business process improvement
- Financing
- Business acquisitions
- Accounting systems
- Succession planning
- Business startups
- Guidance on doing business abroad
- General business consulting
